Competition Practice

CEG is a leading global economic consultancy that provides expert economic analysis in support of competition cases

CEG is amongst the top 20 competition economics consultancies according to Global Competition Review and our partners are consistently included in the GCR's list of recommended competition economists.

We bring together senior experts with experience in leading competition and regulatory agencies, industry and academia. We rigorously apply economic theory and advanced quantitative techniques combined with industry knowledge to offer insightful and dependable advice.

CEG economists prepare expert reports, provide input into client submissions, offer advice on case strategy and provide expert testimony and presentations before competition agencies, courts and arbitral tribunals across the globe.

In recent years, CEG economists have worked on large and important competition and regulatory cases across many industries. CEG was given an award for its work on the case against Rio-Tinto / BHP transaction. We have also been involved in grand-setting competition damages cases.

We have substantial experience of casework before the European Commission as well as national competition agencies across Europe, Australia and New Zealand.

Our offices span Europe, North America and Asia Pacific. We pride ourselves on the ability to present the right arguments and data to agencies in a way they appreciate, using our extensive knowledge of the markets in the jurisdictions in which we work.

Antitrust / Competition

CEG economists have substantial experience of applying economics to Article 101 and 102 cases (and their national equivalents) before the European Commission, national authorities and courts.

Using applied economic theory and empirical techniques, we assess whether firms have substantial market power, whether there is an abuse of market position, whether competition is being harmed, quantify expected concentration efficiencies, and whether state aid constitutes a distortion of competition.

CEG has also advised on a number of major cartel and restrictive agreement investigations brought by the European Commission.

REPRESENTATIVE ENGAGEMENTS

- Clearance of cartel allegations against Colgate Palmolive in the Netherlands
- Economic advice to defendant in car parts cartel case before the European Commission
- Economic advice to UPS in freight forwarding cartel

- Article 101 Case assistance to the Argenta Group before the Italian Competition Authority and in the Italian Court of Appeal in an alleged cartelisation of the vending sector
- Petrol price information sharing proceedings brought by the ACCC against Informed Sources and BP Australia, Caltex, Woolworths and 7-Eleven

Mergers

CEG economists have provided economic analysis essential to clearing high-profile merger cases and presented before the European Commission / ACCC and other competition authorities.

We use advanced economic theory and economic and simulation techniques to test market definition and competitive effects issues as well as the quantification of efficiencies.

Our experts have presented analysis before competition authorities, arbitration tribunals and courts.

REPRESENTATIVE ENGAGEMENTS

- UPC / Vodafone for a complainant in the Netherlands

State aid

CEG economists have extensive experience in applying economic and financial analysis to help public and private sector clients in Article 107 cases.

For ex ante assessment of planned aid measures, we provide economic advice on the design of state support so that it does not constitute State aid and not require notification. In notification procedures, we conduct economic analysis to assess whether a measure is compatible with the internal market. In investigations of aid measures that are already in place or for ex post assessments, we prepare persuasive supporting economic analysis on whether a measure is compatible or whether conditions for compatibility have been met consistently.

We have a strong understanding in the application of the market economy operator (MEO) test in a wide range of aid measures. We assess the existence of market failures, risks of competition distortions, and the balance of positive and negative effects of State aid.

REPRESENTATIVE ENGAGEMENTS

- Compatibility assessment of aid for a solar glass manufacturer in the energy sector
